Late Admission to a Class

After the last day of the add/drop period for the term (as published on the Academic Calendar (https://registrar.northeastern.edu/group/calendar/)) has passed, students may petition to register for a course by working with the advisor for college-level approval and then provost waiver approval. Permission may be granted if seats are available and at the discretion of the instructor. If students are not already registered for a full course load, late admissions may jeopardize full-time status. Tuition financial adjustments are calculated based on the university's refund schedule for course withdrawals. See the Student Financial Services (https://studentfinance.northeastern.edu/policies-procedures/) website for more information.
