The Northeastern Department of Theatre is a hub for creative practice research: We explore theatre and performance both as a living art and as a system of inquiry in order to engage with our global society and the moment in which we live. We offer students a transformative education by aligning performance and production with academic inquiry and professional experiential learning. Our curriculum embraces diverse techniques, philosophies, and measures of success.

Our multidimensional students develop a unique understanding of creative leadership. They are actors, directors, designers, technicians, playwrights, stage managers, producers, and administrators and more. With generosity, integrity, respect, and rigor, we explore theatre as a living art that engages across disciplines.

We produce a variety of productions in the Studio Theatre and Ryder Theatre Lab, where students collaborate with faculty, staff, and professional guest artists to achieve the highest standard of professionalism. With more than 40 co-op partners around the globe, students can connect classroom and stage experiences with the professional world.

Academic Progression Standards

Students must receive a minimum grade of 2.000 in major courses.
